FIRST WELL IN RIBSTONE AREA TO BE STARTED

Drilling Program Call for Seven Wells in New Field

"Spudding in" of the first oil well in the new Ribstone field in the eastern part of the province is to take place Thursday when the Ribstone Oils company will start operations. It is also reported that this company will start its second well within ten days.

Seven oil wells are to be drilled in the Ribstone-Blackfoot field this summer, judging by the drilling programs of various companies.

Drilling is to be started by the end of the month by the Advance company, one of the first of the 1925 companies to enter the Turner Valley field. This well will be known as Advance No. 3, and will be located on legal subdivision 1, section 16, township 45, range 1, west of the fourth meridian. The derrick is being built now while standard equipment is on route to the field along with the casing. With the steel derrick and equipment on the siding at Chauvin, the Imperial Oil Company's well should be under way before long—Edmonton Journal

Descendant of Governor

Duke Dunitz, of Leuchtenberg, Count de Beaulieu, lineal descendant of Charles, Marquis de Beaulieu who governed Canada in the name of the French King Louis XV between 1726 and 1747, is visiting for the first time the country in which his ancestor made history. He is joining his cousin the Marquis de Albriz in a thirty-day tour of the Canadian Rockies and is taking part with him in the grand Pow-Wow held at the Ptarmigan Valley in August. He travelled from Chertbourg on the Canadian Pacific liner Melita and travelled C.P.R. across Canada. Coming down to St. Lawrence he was deeply interested in the province of Quebec with which he is historically connected and passing through Fort William he had another reminder of the days, nearly two hundred years ago when La Verendrye founded the city under the auspices of the Marquis de Beaulieu. His family still keeps a highly interesting letter written in French and Indian on birch bark addressed to the Marquis which him for "the little care you have taken of your child."

Edgerton Echoes

Weather conditions may be alright for picnics and so forth, but we would rather see a little mud again. We feel sure that a good rain would be doubly welcome.

Most of the citizens of Edgerton, also quite a large number from the country, met at the Swindlehurst home last Monday evening as a surprise and presentation party for Evelyn who is soon to leave for England. A splendid evening of fun terminated.

19th ALBERTA DRAGONS

"C" Squadron 19th Alberta Dragons returned from Regimental Camp held at Winterburn, 15 miles N.W. of Edmonton on July 11th, after spending a very enjoyable time under canvas, the weather ideal for the occasion. "C" Squadron under the command of Major Mackenzie, entrained at Chauvin on Wednesday June 30th, detrained at Edmonton July 1st and marched into camp at 2:30. A and B squadrons arriving later in the afternoon.

BANK OF MONTREAL CROP REPORT

General Wheat which is generally headed out in the Prairies, is now approaching the critical period. So far, the crops are coming along satisfactorily, although rain would be welcome in some parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta, where very hot weather has prevailed. In Quebec recent rains have been most beneficial to all crops which previously were suffering from lack of moisture. In Ontario good growing weather has prevailed during the past week, and the outlook is very promising. In the Maritime provinces general conditions continue good, and crops are progressing satisfactorily. In British Columbia hot dry weather is reducing

Mayors Send Congratulations

1. Handing Mayor Foster's letter to the engineer at Toronto.
2. Receiving the letter at Windsor Station, Montreal.

Pressure of traffic and expansion of business between Montreal and Toronto recently led to the inauguration of a new day train service between the two cities by the Canadian Pacific Railway. From Montreal "The York" and from Toronto "The Rideau" are the trains employed in this service. This new departure was marked by the delivery of a letter of congratulation from the Mayor of Toronto to the Mayor of Montreal, by the engineer of "The Rideau" on the first day of the run. On the second day a letter in reply from the Mayor of Montreal to the Mayor of Toronto was carried on "The York." Similar letters were exchanged in the same way between the Presidents of the Boards of Trade of the two cities in connection with the new train service.

The letters between the Mayors of Toronto and Montreal were as follows:—
"Hon. Mederic Martin, Mayor of Montreal: Dear Sir, Mayor, I am a great joy to let the inauguration of the new day train service between the two cities by the Canadian Pacific Railway train connection between our respective cities to send you greetings. The addition by the enterprising Canadian Pacific of this train to the railway service is evidence of the expansion of trade and traffic between Toronto and Montreal. May that expansion continue to our advantage. May I also congratulate you on your return to the office of Mayor of your good city. I hope you will have an abundant success in your administration of civic affairs. Yours truly, Thomas Foster, Mayor."

"His Worship the Mayor, Mr. Thomas Foster, Toronto: Dear Mr. Mayor: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your kind message of greetings through the new Canadian Pacific train connection between Toronto and Montreal, and to thank you for it. It means a lot and that our mutual relations both commercial and social cannot but greatly benefit by it. I am very thankful to you for your congratulations on the occasion of my reelection as first magistrate of Montreal and, looking forward to the pleasure of meeting you in the near future, I beg of you to accept my best wishes and kindest regards. Yours sincerely, Mederic Martin, Mayor."

New C.P.R. Cold Storage Cars

Under old conditions there was always a certain amount of risk in shipping fruit. The entry of dust or cinders, or the high temperature of the car, was frequently the cause of fruit becoming spoiled during transit. But under present conditions, fruit not only retains its coloring, freshness and firmness when it is shipped from one point to another, but it is actually improved.

For many months officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Dominion Express have been carrying on experimental work with a new type of ventilated express car to be used in the handling of soft fruits by express to prairie points, and they have recently arrived at an entirely new method of ventilating express equipment, which is known as the "H. C. Ventilator."

This device allows the air to be received into the car through two spacious intakes located at the ends of the car at the roof, carried to the floor without decreasing in velocity and effectively distributed through the lower sections of the car. Three times a minute there is a complete change of air, 10,276 cubic feet of air per minute being recorded through the intakes and 9,622 through the exhausts.

The new type of ventilator was tested under full load conditions

New type of fruit car showing special ventilators, on the top of the car, which aid the fruit to retain its freshness.
Lower picture shows—Interior of the modern fruit car.

This month, the car containing more than a thousand crates of strawberries, which were carried from Vancouver to Calgary in excellent condition and the new type car is expected. At the end of the journey not a single speck of dust could be found on top of the boxes, and the average temperature of the car was 8 to 10 degrees lower than the outside air, during the entire trip. The strawberries arrived in perfect condition and the new type car is expected to greatly help the fruit-growing industry of British Columbia inasmuch as it opens up the entire prairie district to that trade.

"The Covered Wagon"

"What do you really mean then, Molly—you say, that's why?"

"That's why I'm going to marry you, Sam. Nine days from today, at the Independence Rock, if we are alive. And from now till then, and always, I'm going to be honest, and I'm going to pray God to give you power to make me forget every other man in all the world except my—my—"

"But she could not say the word 'husband.'"

"Your husband!"

He said it for her, and perhaps premeditatedly—selfish devotion, and in good resolves at least. The sun shone blinding hot. The white dust rose in clouds. The plague of flies increased. The rattle and creak of wheel, the monotone of the drivers, the cough of dust-afflicted kine made the only sounds for a long time.

"You can't kiss me, Molly?"

He spoke not in dominance but in diffidence. The girl averted him. "No, not till after, Sam; and I think I'd rather be left alone from now till then. After—Oh, be good to me, Som! I'm trying to be honest as a woman can. If I were not that I'd not be worth marrying at all."

Without suggestion or agreement on his part she drew tighter the reins on her mules. He sprang down over the wheel. The sun and the dust had their way again; the monotony of life, its drab discontent, its yearnings and its sense of failure once more resumed sway in part or all of morose caravan. They all sought new fortunes, each of these. One day each must learn that, travel far as he likes, a man takes himself with him for better or worse.

CHAPTER XXIX

The Broken Wedding

Banion allowed the main caravan two days' start before he moved beyond Fort Laramie. Every reason bade him cut entirely apart from that portion of the Company. He talked with every man he knew who had any knowledge of the country ahead. read all he could find, studied such maps as then existed, and kept an open ear for advice of old-time men who in hard experience had learned how to get across a country.

Two things troubled him: The possibility of grass exhaustion near the trail and the renance of the Indians. Squaw men in from the north and west said that the Arapahoes were hunting on the Sweetwater, and sure to make trouble; that the Blackfeet were planning war; that the Bannocks were east of the Pass; that even the Crows were far down below their normal range and certain to harass the trains. These stoics, not coming he hostility of the Sioux and Cheyennes of the Platte country, made it appear that there was a tacit suspense for intertribal hostility, and a general and joint uprising against the migrating whites.

These facts Banion did not hesitate to make plain to all his men; but, descendants of pioneers, with blood of the wilderness in their veins, and each tempted by adventure as much as by gain, they laughed long and loud at the thought of danger from all the Indians of the Rockies. Had they not beaten the Sioux? Could they not in turn humble the pride of any other tribe? Had not their fathers worked with rifle lashed to the plow beam? Indians? Let them come!

Finding his own future on this resolute spirit of his men, Banion next looked to the order of his own personal affairs. He found (Continued on page 7)

GOLD RUSH NEAR TIMMINS

A placer gold rush is said to be in progress ten miles out of Timmins on the banks of the Grassy river on Ogdon and Price townships, Ontario. The first claim was staked in April last and now that the news has leaked out scores of prospectors are engaged in surveying the area and 45 claims have been recorded at the recorder's office in Timmins.

HOW TO INTRODUCE QUEENS

Before introducing a new queen to a colony of bees it is of the utmost importance that the colony contains no queen or queen cells of its own, otherwise the new queen will be killed if the colony to be required already has a queen of its own and has made no preparations for swarming, remove the old queen and leave the colony queenless for about twelve hours and then introduce the new queen. If, however, the colony has made preparations for swarming, remove the queen, destroy all queen-cells and leave queenless for ten days. On the tenth day again destroy all queen-cells and introduce the new queen. Should the colony be without a queen several days before the new queen is introduced, examine the colony carefully for queen-cells or virgin queens and destroy them before giving the new one. Bees will accept a new queen more readily when nectar is coming in than when there is a dearth, therefore it is better to introduce them during the flow. Feeding the colony with a thin syrup when there is no nectar will make introduction safer during such periods. There are many methods of introducing queens but most of them cannot be relied upon. The cage method, by which the queen and the bees are kept apart in the hive for several hours, is the safest. Queens arriving by mail may be introduced in the mailing cage, following the directions which accompany such cages. Or, better still, transfer the queen, but not her attendants, to a Miller Candy Cage, select a few young bees from the colony to which she is to be introduced and put in the cage with her. Place the cage either between the top bars of the frames or in the entrance of the hives. The Canadian cage, which is a combination of the candy and the push-in cage, has been found best at Ottawa. The bees release the queen as from the other cages. When using either the Miller or Canadian cages, the hole through which the bees release the queen is filled with candy and a narrow strip of stiff paper is placed over the mouth of the hole to prevent the bees from releasing the queen too quickly.

BRITAIN SEES WEST AS TRADE FIELD

"Western Canada is being increasingly regarded by manufacturers and merchants of Great Britain as a promising field for the sale of their products," said A. E. Pollard, newly appointed British trade commissioner at Vancouver, recently. Mr. Pollard was for five years head of the Canadian section of the Department of Overseas Trade, London, and succeeds L. B. Beale, transferred from Vancouver to Wellington, New Zealand.

U. S. FARMERS COMING TO CANADA

Marked activity in the movement of agricultural settlers from the United States to Canada is noted by the Dominion Government of immigration and colonization. In the month of June 1925 settlers, who with their wives and families represent 312 persons, came into Canada from Fargo, North Dakota, bringing with them cash and effects to the value of $495,550. The Canadian National Railways colonization officials at St. Paul, Minn., were responsible for a large number of these farmer settlers emigrating to the Canadian prairies.

ALBERTA - Western Area: Conditions continue satisfactory; wheat is heading out as a result of about a week of hot weather. Moisture generally is sufficient for present, but rain would be beneficial.

Northwestern Area: All reports indicate a good crop, except from Chipman to Manville, where moisture is required, although wheat in summerfallow and new breaking is still standing up fairly well.

Southeastern Area: Crops are suffering from hot weather and range from very fair to poor. The average yield will probably be low.

Saskatchewan, Northern Area: Crop prospects have been improved by recent rains, which have been fairly general, but the previous hot weather will reduce the yield on light land.

Southern Area: Wheat and other grains are well advanced and in a healthy condition. Weeds are prevalent in some districts. There is sufficient moisture at nearly all points. Considerable hail damage has been experienced recently.

Manitoba: Crops have benefited from the general rainfall of last week and look well. Early sown wheat has headed out a week earlier than last year. Conditions are satisfactory and prospects favourable.

• Ancient and Modern Meet in Rockies

Upper—Leather spring coach used to travel in Rockies, before the motor car age.
Lower Left—Modern eight-sewing cars of today.
Lower Right—Motor car of 1902, used in the Canadian Rockies.

As the evening shadows began to lengthen across the Bow Valley in the Canadian Rockies on the last day of May, a diminutive time-worn, rust-bitten, two cylinder motor car of 1902 vintage chugged through the portals of the Rockies into Banff, to join the throng of motor cars on Banff Avenue and unwittingly form a historic pageant indicative of the developments in motor transportation during twenty-four years.

As it happens at such times, the shades of the past arise to refresh the memories of old-timers and bring forth reminiscences indicating the progress made within recent years. And so with the shades of the past evoked by one of the first "horseless carriages," mingling with its gliding brothers of the modern age.

When it too glittered with newness the mountain valleys knew not the odor of gasoline and the ordered roar of the exhaust, the old-timer onlookers said. No fine pavements such as at present grace the streets of the famous mountain resort, smoothed out the irregularities. The dirt surface of Banff Avenue knew only pedestrian, saddle and pack-ponies, and the iron tired wheels of the lumbering leather spring coach, used as the first sight-seeing vehicle in the Rockies.

In 1916, the Canadian Government opened the park gates to motor travel. In 1926, the motor sight-seeing equipment, used to carry passengers by motor through the Rockies from the Banff Springs Hotel to the chain of other Canadian Pacific railway hotels and bungalow camps, numbered a hundred modern motor cars and sight-seeing buses. In 1926, the system carried 220,000 passengers a total of approximately a million miles in three of Canada's mountain national parks. Thirty-six thousand motor cars, carrying 126,000 holiday-makers, passed through the gates of the Kootenay and Banff National Parks during the same season.

On June 16, the new Lake Louise to Field Highway was opened to the motorist, uniting the three national parks by motor road and increasing the grand total of modern highway in the mountains to approximately 230 miles. But when the diminutive motor vehicle was the latest creation for automobiles, the mileage of roads in the mountains could be counted on the fingers of both hands.

The day following its arrival in Banff, R. Stacey, Kelso, Washington, filled the gas tank of the 1902 car and set out over the Banff-Windermere Highway enroute for home. He is driving the car from Edmonton, Alberta, where it recently won the first prize in the light car class of the old car contest conducted by the Edmonton Journal.

In crossing the two summits on the highway, a modern car was called into action to aid the ancient vehicle over the top. By afternoon it reached Radium Bungalow Camp at the south end of Kootenay National Park, where the owner called it a day after covering ninety miles.

AN ANNUAL EVENT OF INTEREST

The Butcher Twins entertained in their usual hearty style at the annual Bachelor's party last Wednesday evening. There was a large number present.

Mr. Yanfort cut the cheese for the first two hours, Mr. Somman was custodian of the sardines and passed the soda biscuits. Later those strenuous duties were assumed by Messrs Celspar, Nightly Sivard respectively.

Mr. Celspar was toastmaster of the evening. The toast to "Our Absent Wives" was proposed by Mr. Somman and responded to by Nightly, and the toast to "The Joys of Batching" was proposed by Mr. Manfree and responded to by Mr. Yanfort.

Needless to say the party did not dissolve until the early hours of the morning, when it became necessary for our worthy Bachelors to avail themselves of forty winks before the arduous tasks of a new day.

PREPARING SHEAVES AND GRAIN FOR EXHIBITIONS

The first essential naturally, is the availability of strong, clean well developed undamaged plants. Such plants can be obtained most easily, as a rule from a special plot sown and treated in a manner conducive to the production of plants possessing the highest degree of excellence. In the absence of such plots the exhibitor has no recourse, but to seek for the best plants he can find growing in his regular fields.

It is seldom possible to construct first-class sheaves from plant already harvested with the binder. Rather must the harvesting be done by hand and with special care.

For best results select only straight, uniform plants which possess well developed heads or panicles, and which are slightly immature and therefore less brittle. Cut the plants off close to the ground and spread them in layers in the sun for a short time to dry and bleach slightly. Then gather carefully and place in a well ventilated building out of the direct rays of the sun, and protected against birds and vermin.

The ideal sheaf has a well rounded head, obtained by allowing the straws in the centre to stand a little higher than those towards the margins. The diameter of the ideal sheaf should not be less than 8 inches at the band. Large sheaves may be built up from a number of smaller ones tied together firmly to form a "core". Such structures, of course, require to be finished off with a thick layer of clean straws from which the leaves have been carefully trimmed. Colored ribbon from 1/2 to 3/4 inch in width may be used with good effect to cover the binding cords. The sheaf should be wrapped in paper, carefully tied and fitted snugly into a box before shipping.

(Sheaves for exhibition at the Chauvin Fair must be not less than 4 inches and not less than 6 inches in diameter, below head.)

In preparing threshed grain for exhibition purposes the main objective is to secure a sample composed of grain which is plump sound, bright, uniform in size and shape and free from all impurities. Care should be exercised to avoid damaging the grain in any way when preparing it for exhibition. Excellent samples frequently are disqualified on account of damage done by overzealous exhibitors who "clip" their grain in order to make it appear plumper. This applies particularly to oats and barley.

Don't miss this opportunity of seeing Mary Pickford next Monday in the charming role of "Little Annie Rooney." A picture full of delightful interest and one that is of especial interest to old and young. Who would not be eager to see a picture with such title, and featuring such a favorite as Mary Pickford.

Students Tour in China and Japan

Indicating the great attraction which "The Immemorial East" exercises on the Occident, here are a group of happy student boys who are determined to see for themselves what everyone at some time or other talks about and discusses. They are photographed on board the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia and sailed recently on that ship for the Orient from Vancouver for a six weeks' tour of China and Japan under the auspices of the Arts and Crafts Guild. In that time they will see many of the famous shrines and cities of the two countries and will come back with a wealth of new ideas reinforced by actual experience of the two greatest examples of the East. They will return to Canada on the Empress of Russia arriving at Vancouver August 6.

Take a few minutes and read this week's ads.

prices so high at Fort Laramie, and the stock of all manner of goods so low, that he felt it needless to carry his own trading wagons all the way to Oregon, when a profit of 400 per cent lay ready not a third of the way across and less the further risk and cost. He accordingly cut down his own stocks to one wagon, and sold off his wagons and oxen as well, until he found himself possessed of considerably more funds than when he had started out.

He really cared little for these matters. What need had he for a fortune or a future now? He was poorer than any Jean-clad ox driver with a sunbonnet on the seat beside him and tow-headed children on the floor and bacon sacks, with small belongings beyond the plow lashed at the tail gate, the axe leaning in the front corner of the box and the rifle swinging in its loops at the wagon bows. They were all beginning life again. He had done with it.

The entire caravan now had passed in turn the Prairies and the Plains. In the vestibule of the mountains they had arrived in the most splendid out-of-doors country the world has ever offered. The climate was superb, the scenery was a constant succession of changing beauties new to the eyes of all. Game was at hand in such lavish abundance as none of them had dreamed possible. The buffalo ranged always within touch, great bands of elk were in sight. The streams abounded in noble game fish, and the lesser life of the open was threaded across continually by the presence of the great predatory animals—the grizzly, the gray wolf, even an occasional mountain lion. The guarding of the cattle and herds now required continual exertion, and if any weak or crippled draft animal fell out its bones were cleaned within an hour. The feeling of the wilderness was now distinct enough for the most adventurous. They fed fat, and daily grew more like savages in look and practice.

Wingate's wagons kept well apace with the average schedule of a dozen miles daily, at times spurring to fifteen or twenty miles, and made the leap over the heights of land between the North Platte and the Sweetwater, which latter stream, often wandering among defiles as well as pleasant meadows was to lead them to the summit of the Rockies at South Pass, beyond which they set foot on the soil of Oregon, reaching thence to the Pacific. Before them now lay the entry mark of the Sweetwater Valley, that strange oblong upthrust of rock, rising high above the surrounding plain, known for two thousand miles as Independence Rock.

At this point, more than eight hundred miles from the Missouri, a custom of unknown age seemed to have decreed a pause. The great rock was a unmistakable landmark, and time out of mind had been a register of the wilderness. It carried hundreds of names, including every prominent one ever known in the days of fur trade or the new day of the wagon trains. It became known as a resting place: indeed, many rested there forever, and never saw the soil of Oregon. Many an emigrant woman, sick well-nigh to death, held out so that she might be buried among the many other graves that clustered there. So, she felt, she had the final company of her kind. And to those weak or faint of heart the news that this was not half way across often smote with despair and death, and they, too, laid themselves down here by the road to Oregon.

But here also were many scenes of cheer. By this time the new life of the trail had been taken on, rude and simple. Frolics were promised when the wagons should reach their rock. Neighbors made reunions there. Weddings, as well as burials, were postponed till the train got to Independence Rock.

Here then, a sad-faced girl true to her promise and true to some strange philosophy of her own devising, was to become the wife of a suitor whose persistency had brought him little comfort beyond the wedding day. All the train knew that Molly Wingate was to be married there to Sam Woodhull, now restored to trust and authority. Some said it was a good match, others shook their heads, liking well to see a maid either blush or smile in such case as Molly's, whereas she did neither.

At all events, Mrs. Wingate was two days baking cakes at the train stops. Friends got together little presents for the bride. Jed, Molly's brother, himself a fiddler of parts, organized an orchestra of a dozen pieces. The Rev. Henry Doak, a Baptist divine of much nuptial diligence en route, made ready his best coat. They came into camp. In the open spaces of the valley hundreds of wagons were scattered, each to send representatives to Molly Wingate's wedding. Some insisted that the ceremony should be performed on the top of the Rock itself, so that no touch of romance should lack.

Then approached the very hour—ten of the night, after duties of the day were done. A canopy was spread for the ceremony. A central camp fire set the place for the wedding feast. Within a half hour the bride would emerge from the secrecy of her wagon to meet at the canopy under the Rock the impatient groom, already ready clad in his best, already giving largess to the riotous musicians, who now attuned instruments, now broke out into rude jests or pertinent song.

But Molly Wingate did not appear, nor her father, nor her mother. A hush fell on the rude assemblage. The minister of the gospel departed to the cause of emancipation to learn the cause of the delay. He found Jesse Wingate irate to open wrath, the girl's mother stony calm, the girl herself white but resolute.

"She insists on seeing the marriage license," Mrs. Doak," began Jesse Wingate. "As though she could have one! As though she should care more for that than her parents!"

"Quite so," rejoined the reverend man. "That is something I have taken up with the happy groom. I have with all the couples I have joined in wedlock on the trail. Of course, being a lawyer, Mr. Woodhull knows that even if they stood before the meeting and acknowledged themselves man and wife it would be a lawful marriage before God and man. Of course, also we all know that since we left the Missouri River we have been in an unorganized territory, with no courts and no form of government, no society as we understand it at home. Very well. Shall loving hearts be kept asunder for those reasons? Shall the natural course of life be thwarted until we get to Oregon? Why, sir, that is absurd! We do not even know much if the government of Oregon itself, except that it is provisional."

The face of Molly Wingate appeared at the drawn curtains of her transient home. She stepped from her wagon and came forward. Beautiful, but not radiant, she was; cold and calm, but not blushing and uncertain. Her wedding gown was all in white, true enough to tradition, though but of delaine, pressed new from its packing trunk by her mother's hands. Her bodice, long and deep in front and at back, was plain entirely save for a treasure of lace from her mother's trunk and her mother's wedding long ago. Her hands had no gloves, but white short-fingered mitts, also cherished remnants of days of schoolgirl bellehood, did service. Over white stockings, below the long and full-bodied skirt, showed the crossed bands of long elastic tapes tied in an ankle bow to hold in place her little slippers of black high-finished leather. Had they seen her, all had said that Molly Wingate was the sweetest and the most richly clad bride of any on all the long, long trail across the aid that had no law. And all he lacked for her wedding costume was the bride's bouquet, which her mother now held out to her, gathered with care that day of the mountain flowers—blue harebells, forget-me-nots of varied blues and the blossom of the gentian, bold and blue in the sunlight, though at night infolded and abashed, its petals turning in and waiting for the sun again to warm them.

Molly Wingate, stout and stern, full blossomed, wet eyed, held out her one little present to her girl, her eye lamb, whom she was now surrendering. But no hand of the bride was extended for the bride's bouquet. The voice of the bride was not low and diffident, but high pitched and insistent. "Provisional! Provisional! What is it you are saying sir? Are you asking me to be married in a provisional wedding? Am I to give all I have provisionally? Is my oath provisional, or his?"

"Now, now, my dear!" began the minister. Her father broke out into a half-fisted oath. "What do you mean?" Her mother's face went pale under its red bronze. "I mean this," broke out the girl, still in the strained high that betokened her mental state. "I'll marry no man in any half-way fashion! Why didn't you tell me? Why didn't I think? How could I have forgotten? Law organization, society, convention, form, custom—haven't I got even those things to back me? No? Then I've nothing! It was—those things—form, custom—that I was going to have to support me! I've got nothing else. Gone—they're gone, too! And you ask me to marry him—provisionally—provisionally! Oh, my God! what awful thing was this! I wasn't even to have that solid thing to rest on, back of me, after it all was over!"

They stood looking at her for a time, trying to catch and weigh her real intent, to estimate what it might mean as to her action. "Like images, you are!" she went on hysterically, her physical craving for one man, her physical loathing of another, driving her well-nigh mad. "You wouldn't protect your own daughter!"—to her surprised parents. "Must I think for you at this hour of my life? How near—oh, how near! But not now—not this way! No! Not!"

"What do you mean, Molly?" demanded her father sternly, "Come now, we'll have no woman tantrums at this stage! This goes on! They're waiting! He's waiting!"

"Let him wait!" cried the girl in sudden rebellion. All her soul was in the cry, all her outraged, self-punished heart. Her philosophy fell from her swiftly at the crucial moment when she was to face the kiss, the embrace of another man. The great irritation of her woman nature suddenly sounded, imperative, terrifying in her own ears—"Oh, Will Banion, Will Banion, why did you take away my heart!" And now she had been on the point of doing this thing! An act of God had intervened.

Jessie Wingate nodded to the minister. They drew apart. The holy man nodded assent, hurried away—the girl sensed on what errand.

"No use!" she said. "I'll not!"

Stronger and stronger in her soul surged the yearning for the dominance of one man, not this man yonder—a yearning too strong now for her to resist.

"But Molly, daughter," her mother's voice said to her, "girls has—girls does. And like she said, it's the promise, it's the agreement they both make, with witnesses."

"Yes, of course," her father chimed in. "It's the consent in the contract when you stand before them all."

"I'll not stand before them. I don't consent! There is no agreement!"

Suddenly the girl reached out and caught from her mother the faithful little bride's bouquet.

"Look!" she laughed. "Look at these!"

One by one, rapidly she tore out and flung down the folded gentian flowers.

"Closed, closed! When the night came, they closed! They couldn't! They couldn't! I'll not—I can't!"

She had the hand's clasp of uncertain blossoms stripped down to a few small flowers of varied blooms. They heard the coming of the groom, half running. A silence fell over all the great excitement. The girl's father made a half step forward, even as her mother sank down, covering her hands at her face.
